city which could not afford to send a secutional man to Copgress. He did not regard the Republican party as an abolition party.

He defined abolition as the act of those who would interfere by violence with the relation of master and slave. The recent affair at Harper's Ferry furnished a strong illustration of practical abolition in its most hideous form. There were abolitionists who would contribute money or otherwise to make compensation to the master for the service of his slave, and in consideration of the surrender of his title he knew there were refusing to act with the party. In answer to an enquiry put by Clark, whether Mr. Smith would deem it as good ground for a disunion of the Union, if he should find the people of the North combined as a sectional party sgainst the South, Mr. Smith replied that whenever the combination of a majoric

Mr. Kilgore, of Ind., replied, No, not in the Southern States. Gov. Chase, in a recent speech, has suggested that every Government official should be imbued with anti-slavery doctrines, and that that principle should be one of the tests for getting appointments. If the North elected Seward or Chase, or any other member of the Republican party on a sectional platform, the election was to be resisted to the disruption of every tie which binds together this great confederacy. [Applause from the Democratic benches]

Curry referred to the recent Union demonstration at the North. He said that though they were more or less gratifying, as evincing a returning sense of justice at the North, yet they amounted to nothing—they were not the true index of public opinion. The test of public opinion was through the ballet box and looking to this test. ion. The test of public opinion was through the bullot box, and looking to this test, he found that New England stood here arrayed in a solid phalanx against the Constitutional rights of the South. That N. York stood here with but four or five representatives disposed to befriend the South and Southern interests. The same was true in a greater or lesser extent in regard to Pa., Ohio and other States. When he looked at these indications he was not to be fulled into accurity by demonstrations at Union meet. security by demonstrations at Union meet
